

Manners

Having good manners is a great way to be polite and show respect for others. Here are some adjective rules we can all follow:

1. When asking for something, say "word or phrase."
2. When receiving something, say "word or phrase."
3. When people ask you how you are, tell them "I'm adjective and then ask them "a question".
4. If you bump into somebody, immediately say "word or phrase."
5. Cover your body part when you cough or sneeze, and don't pick your body part in public.

By following these rules, you are sure to be adjective!
