

3.8 Present Perfect Continuous Tense: Review

Remember: if something was happening before, and it is still happening now, you use the present perfect continuous tense.

Using the example below, write present perfect continuous tense sentences with the information provided.

Example:

It started raining at noon.

It is still raining now (6:00).

It has been raining for 6 hours.

or: It has been raining since noon.

or: It has been raining ever since noon.

1. I moved to South Africa 6 years ago.
I still live in South Africa now.

2. Greg started playing the piano when he was a child.
Greg still plays piano as an adult.

3. This movie started at 12:00.
I am still watching this movie now (at 3:00).

4. You were coughing last week.
You are still coughing now!

5. John and Lisa were dating in 2023.
They are still dating now.

6. I called you on the phone at 4:00.
It is 9:00, and we are still talking on the phone!